The Wrinkle Retic Shares

Oooh! I have another give-away!

So soon, you ask? Yes, because I just can't wait on this one.

I recently tried a new face mask my mom sent me made entirely from natural and organic ingredients and it knocked my socks off. Was it because the mask had cocoa powder and made me feel as if I were making out with a Ghirardelli bar? Um, maybe.

But also because the moment I rinsed the mask off, Bob happened to walk by. Normally, the man notices nothing. Really. Once I dyed my normally blonde hair (of course it's naturally that way. cough.) auburn for a trip to Paris and I bounced in front of him and asked him how he liked my new hair. He had to wonder, hmmm, was it maybe shorter?

So Bob walked by and stopped. He looked at me and squinted his eyes and said, "Wow. Your skin looks really, really good."

Game over. I was hooked. So without further ado, let me introduce to you to my new favorite face mask in the entire world, ever, Muddy H2O. This stuff is fantastic, and contains really cool ingredients like cocoa powder, natural french clay, organic calendula, comfrey root and ground chickpea powder. There is nothing artificial in these wonder masks and after using the chocolate mask my skin was soft, smooth, and glowed like Jack's bottom. Before the rash.

I also used the French Clay mask, and mixed it with some pureed pumpkin like I read on their website. Holy small pores, Batman! I had considered going to my local day spa for their pumpkin enzymatic peel (for way too much money) and now I think that would be a waste of time and money.

BlogHer Ad Network

Want your own? I'm giving away SIX natural face and body masks for you to try. Three French Clay and three chocolate. But seriously, these things are so inexpensive that you would all be silly, big-pored fools to not rush here or here and get yourself some chocolate blueberry amazingness.

Today and tomorrow all who comment are open for the draw.

Ooooh, chocolate on the face? I'm practically licking myself when I use the cocoa butter lotion - I don't know how I'd stop myself (except, you know, that it's mud).

I hope I win chocolate.

ABOUT ME

JEN M.

I have four children. I live in my car. I have a strange urge, about once every three years or so, to keep having more kids. I'm not a big fan of collectable figurines, kittens, or scrapbooking, yet I'm a Girl Scout Leader. Go figure. By the way, I feel that I should say this, much like lemon scented detergent has a warning not to consume their product, that I don't really LIVE in my car. It's just where I spend most of my day, shuttling one or more of the kids to doctor appointments, school, Girl Scouts, swim team, gymnastics, or church. I have a husband, and he's "one of the good guys." Just ask him. Confession: we don't go to church that often. We really, really mean to, but Sunday is when our piano teacher comes to teach the girls and frankly, it's a toss

I wanna win! I want to make out with a Ghirardelli bar! ;)

I'm going to comment on this post 'cause I want in on the drawing, but I really want to say "Wow!" on the birthing a book business. I also wanted to direct you to the website of a friend of a friend of mine, who is a teacher that successfully became a young adult book author. I can't say for sure, but I bet if you e-mailed her she'd be chock full of good advice--that's the kind of gal she is. Her name is

Laura Preble and her site is:

If it has chocolate in it, count me in! And if it got a man to notice, it must be amazing. You should contact the company and they could use that in their advertising -- "Makes your skin look so amazing that even a man would notice!"
